BON SECOURS MERCY HEALTH

ELEVATOR speech

Hi! Have you ever heard of Bon Secours Mercy Health? They're one of the largest and most comprehensive health systems in the U.S. What's really great about them is that they're not just focused on treating people when they're sick; their whole mission revolves around helping communities thrive by promoting well-being and health at every level. They have Bon Secours and Mercy Health hospitals, primary care offices, and specialized centers spread across six states, from Ohio to South Carolina.

But what really sets them apart is their deep commitment to serving everyone—especially the most vulnerable. It's part of their long-standing Catholic history. Mercy Health and Bon Secours, which means 'good help' in French, were both founded by groups of nuns in the 1800s, and that compassionate, mission-driven care is still at the heart of what they do. Bon Secours and Mercy Health merged in 2018, and together they've built an organization that not only offers cutting-edge medical treatments but also are working to deal with all the barriers to good health—things like transportation and food insecurity. These are just as important to someone's well-being as medical care itself.

Bon Secours Mercy Health is also big on innovation. For example, they're incorporating technology like telemedicine to reach more patients and make healthcare more accessible, especially in underserved areas. It's that blend of tradition and forward-thinking that really makes Bon Secours Mercy Health stand out in the healthcare world.

If you're ever thinking about giving back, donating to the Bon Secours Mercy Health Foundation is an incredible way to make a real difference. Every donation goes straight into supporting the local programs, services, and facilities that help thousands of people every day.

Some of the needs that are met through donations include making sure those who can't afford care get the help they need, funding new medical technologies, supporting frontline caregivers, and upgrading facilities. Your contribution really counts and makes an impact.

It's not just about healthcare—it's about lifting up entire communities and helping people live better, healthier lives. So, if you're looking to support something meaningful, this is definitely a great place to start!
